E. H. Rogge, his wife, in a space left blank for the insertion of the name of the person who was to receive the entire estate. He said that on the day of his aunt's death his mother, the sole legatee, held Mrs. Smith's elbow to steady her hand while she wrote her signature at the bottom of the instrument. Dr. Schenck testified that he believed Smith was not physically able to write her name on the day she died.
